Adversity

written by Timothy J. Young, CEO / President

“Show me someone who has done something worthwhile, and I’ll show you someone who has overcome adversity.” ~ Lou Holtz

Success in life depends upon being strong individuals with goals and inspirations. Unfortunately, most of us are not born that way - we grow that way. That growth can either come from us entering willfully into situations that will cause us to grow or from the way we react when circumstances come upon us without our consent, otherwise known as adversity.

Every contact we have with adversity gives us the opportunity to grow personally and professionally. Adversity, and how we react to it, reveals our character. That piece in each of us strengthens to allow us to draw every resource we have to overcome and conquer circumstances as they occur, both large and small. In other words, adversity molds us into who we become.

Each nominee and eventual winner recognized at our 2013 Awards of Excellence has, as most of our employees have, overcome adversity in their lives. I congratulate each and everyone as they have achieved excellence in their field of work. May you continue to succeed, whether it is at Licking/Knox Goodwill or in your personal life. It is individuals like you who make our organization stronger and better prepared for the future, no matter what adversities we face. Thank you for your dedication, commitment and pursuit of excellence.

The time of year for icy and snowy weather is here! No matter how much or how little driving experience a person has, it is always valuable to review the basics of vehicle control. Good drivers know the special hazards of winter driving but should be reminded about the danger of skidding when, especially speed is too high.

A skid is one of the most terrifying experiences of winter driving. If it happens at a high speed, the result could be a disastrous crash. That is why it is urgent to slow down at the first hint of slick roads. Most skids can be avoided by simply adjusting to the conditions and knowing how to recover from a skid.

An experienced driver knows skids are most likely to occur on curves and turns, so slow down ahead of time to prepare. When driving through a curve, slightly apply power and steer steady with no abrupt change in direction and, especially, no abrupt braking.

Plan ahead of time for lane changes; check your rearview mirror, your blind spots, and signal your intentions to traffic behind you. Once the lane is clear, pull over in a long, gradual tangent. Make the move with the smallest possible steering change and with a light foot on the gas.

If you go into a skid, remember two critical rules—don’t steer against the skid and don’t hit the brakes. Instead, steer in the direction the vehicle is sliding until you feel recovery of traction, then slowly straighten the wheels and keep rolling.

If braking is necessary before rolling traction is recovered, apply the brake pedal carefully so you do not lock the wheels and intensify the skid. You will have better control in a skid situation if your vehicle is equipped with anti-lock brakes.

The expert driver is constantly on the lookout for areas that may induce skidding, such as unexpected ice patches or piles of wet leaves. These hazards tend to be found in shady areas or on overpasses. Keep in mind that “wet” ice, warmed by the sun, is twice as treacherous as “cold” ice.

Above all, the expert driver knows a safe stop on icy or snow packed roads is a tricky maneuver which requires skill and good judgment. First of all, anticipate stops. Slow down gradually, well ahead of intersections. Be aware that approaches to stops are apt to be polished and slick because of stopping and starting traffic.

Since accidents are common in winter, the expert driver makes a double allowance. First, drive on slippery roads at reduced speed; second, increase the following distance behind the vehicle ahead. This gives an extra “cushion” for safe stopping. As every driver knows, tricky traction makes a difference between winter and summer driving. Every driver should learn how to get the best possible traction when the road is slippery.

When you drive in deep snow, you may find stepping on the gas only causes the wheels to spin with little, if any, forward movement. In such cases, one should avoid over-powering. A light foot on the gas pedal and a high gear is preferable.

Braking distance depends directly on the kind of contact the vehicle’s tires make with the slippery surface of the road. Your tires should have a good tread surface. There will be times snow tires, and even chains, may be best to help keep your vehicle under control during blustery winter storms.

Once construction work started, they worked many days and nights to meet the re-grand opening deadline. The staff was thrilled to be back in their newly remodeled store. From Stable to Stage a History of Weathervane Playhouse Weathervane Playhouse had its birth in a barn in Heath, Ohio, July 8, 1969, opening with a most appropriate musical, Good News! From the first moment, Licking County’s professional summer theater grew in the hearts and minds of the local community.

After having been housed in a barn, a tent, and a large, open-air pavillion, Weathervane Playhouse moved to its permanent location on land provided by the Thomas J. Evans Foundation. It was in the spring 1976, with strong community support from the Newark Area Jaycees and the Ohio National Guard, that the theater was transported and rebuilt in its present location.

The steel-beamed structure created for Weathervane housed eleven years of exciting, enriching productions. Then, early Thanksgiving morning, 1987, the structure succumbed to a tragic fire.

Once again, the community rallied. Financial support came from private and public sectors. Rebuilding advanced through the efforts of JBA Architects, Ree and Brezina Contractors, Craig Young Construction, and Dale Wolford’s and Jim Shoemaker’s Building Trade Classes of the Licking County Joint Vocational School.

Scott Keys, Managing Director during this difficult period, continued his dedicated work for Weathervane and brought the 1988 season to fruition. The first phase of rebuilding was completed just in time for the season opener. On June 15, 1989, the second phase of reconstruction was completed and the structure was dedicated as the Mary A. Alford Memorial Theatre.

The “growing pains” of Weathervane continued in 1994. Just prior to the opening of the season, one of the biggest fires in the history of downtown Newark occurred, destroying the Playhouse’s complete costume collection of some fifteen years. When the plea went out to rebuild the costume stock, the response was overwhelming and continues to this day.

Since the reconstruction of the theater, many improvements have been made. Landscaping, additional parking, theater siding, exterior lighting, refurbishing of the restrooms, the purchase of new light and sound systems, and construction of a catwalk are but a few of the improvements made.

Then Weathervane turned its sights to the education and entertainment of children, embarking on a Children’s Theatre structure. This $135,000 building was made possible through a generous donation from long-time Weathervane supporter Larry W. Anderson, in memory of his wife Dawn Holt Anderson. The remaining monies were collected through a sale of personalized paving bricks that currently make up the “Children’s Walk”, a beautiful pathway leading from our outdoor pavilion to the front entrance of the Children’s Theatre. The structure was completed in the Spring of 1999.

The Larry W. and Dawn Holt Anderson Children’s Theater has proved to be a valuable addition to Weathervane, allowing us to hold acting and singing workshops and other events, with many more scheduled for the upcoming seasons.

In 2007, Weathervane launched the “Next Stage” Capital Campaign to renovate and climate control the main stage, lobby, and Children’s Theatre, completing the first phase of construction in summer 2010. A second phase will include onsite costume storage, new dressing rooms, and upgrades to the sound and lighting systems.

Weathervane Playhouse has been a story of resolve, rebirth, and rekindling through community efforts. The ongoing contributions, donations, and moral support continue to make the chapters in the Weathervane book a true success story.
